

benchmark?

breakpoints?

yield curve?

Know what these terms mean to your money?

Even if you do, you can learn lots more at finra.org. FINRA is the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority. They don't sell a thing — they regulate securities firms and stockbrokers that do. And as a not-for-profit financial resource, FINRA offers a wealth of unbiased facts and tools you can really use. Education. Not opinions.

To find out how interest rates shape a yield curve or why it helps to compare your investments to a benchmark, head for finra.org.

